Complying with the request of the ad-jutant-general's office pursuant to an order from the war department for as to the men in class one of the draft, and how they are apportioned, the clerk of the Washington county local board has sent to the adjutant-general a statement which shows the following men actually and finally classified for general or full military service: 341 whites and three colored; delinquents 50; limited service-only 163; remediable group 15; inducted since December 31, 1917, 165; called but not entrained 18; classified but not yet taken physical examination 30;

Frank Facini and Ryland Talsey of Montpelier have made application through he war service exchange as commissary storekeepers, Thomas Hoy of Barre as electrician and Raiph G. Arnold of More-town as chauffeur. Lyndol Waterman of Barre, who is employed in Massachusetts, has made application for service through the same department as a pattern maker. The Washington county local exemption board is quite upset over the recent reports from Camp Wadsworth as men who went away from this county last February and will try to find out why the county has not been credited with the men. The report to the adju-tant-general's office shows but 28 men enlisted out of over 75, while the local board report only shows 11 rejected. But neither of these agree with a letter from one of the boys at the camp, in which it was stated that 74 of the men who went from this county have been placed in the companies representing Washington county. Several letters have been received from the boys who, the army officer reports as rejected, in which they state the company to which they have been assigned so that the local believes some "funny" taken place.
